

Call for Papers and Presentations
The 13th Northeastern Recreation Research Symposium
April 1-3, 2001

Held at the historic island resort, The Sagamore, the Northeastern Recreation Research (NERR) Symposium offers you an unparalleled opportunity to exchange information with other recreation, tourism, and resource managers, planners and researchers.

The purpose of the NERR Symposium is to provide a regional forum for individuals representing the governmental, educational and private sectors to share scientific knowledge and positively influence the recreation profession.

There are four types of presentation formats: paper and poster presentations, management presentations, and roundtable discussions. Paper and poster presentations are considered equal in terms of expected scholarly quality. At their core, management and roundtable discussions should have a focus on application.

Research paper presentation: A 15-minute presentation followed by 5 minutes of discussion.

Poster presentation: A 60-minute session during which time authors must be available for questions and discussion.

Management presentation: A 90-minute session focusing on current recreation management issues.

Roundtable discussion: A 60 to 90-minute informal session that initiates discussion of timely and controversial topics.

The following are examples of topical areas. However, we welcome and encourage presentations on other areas of recreation research and management.

- Natural resource management
- Emerging and existing trends
- Travel and tourism
- Human dimensions
- Historical/cultural resource management
- Measurement and forecasting
- Sustainable tourism
- Policy development and planning

RE: Call for Papers and Presentations

As a previous attendee at the Northeastern Recreation Research Symposium (NERR), you are well aware of the unparalleled opportunity the Symposium offers for exchanging information with other recreation, tourism, and resource managers, planners, and researchers. Our 13th Annual Symposium will be held April 1-3, 2001, at the historic island resort, The Sagamore, on Lake George in Bolton Landing, New York.

The Symposium provides you with a chance to be exposed to interdisciplinary perspectives on a variety of resource management issues, to offer insight into some of the latest issues in recreation-based research, and to interact with individuals experiencing similar situations and dilemmas. As noted in the enclosed Call for Papers and Presentations, we are seeking both research presentations and timely issues for discussion in resource management roundtable discussions.

If you haven't been to a NERR Symposium in a few years, we still work hard to maintain a relaxed atmosphere that is conducive to idea exchange and non-threatening peer review of research in progress. NERR continues to be an excellent forum for graduate student presentations. The U.S. Forest Service also provides a convenient publication outlet by producing an annual proceedings.

We have also strived to keep the conference fees reasonable. Early registration will be $85 for students, $125 for professionals, with a room rate of $81 for up to four persons. To encourage family participation, spouses are invited to attend all events (including the luncheon banquet) for a reduced rate of only $50. Please note that both conference registration and room reservation forms will be mailed by early January, 2001.

I sincerely hope you will submit an abstract for consideration in this year's program. Remember to check the preliminary schedule, available January 26, 2001, at our website (<http://www.cas.psu.edu/docs/cashome/nerr.html>), and make plans to join us in April 2001 as we continue to wrestle with contemporary issues of recreation, leisure, and natural resource management.
