Silviculture Instructor's Field Tour

Traditionally, silviculturists and other applied ecologists have met before each year's National Society of American Foresters meeting to experience local forestry and silviculture. This year, in association with the National meeting in Buffalo, New York, our Silviculture Instructor's Field Tour will be conducted in the Adirondack region of New York. Our theme: "Intervening in forest stands near and around the Adirondacks (with a few associated silviculture stretches)".

We will start and stop in Syracuse, New York, and spend most of our time centrally housed in a Great Camp at SUNY-ESF's Huntington Wildlife Forest. We will visit with foresters and wildlife biologists on College, State, and private properties throughout the central and southwestern Adirondacks, with a few twists thrown in to expand our perspectives on forest vegetation management.

This field tour/workshop is intended for silviculture instructors, although related professions are welcome.

Instructors: Drs. Chris Nowak and Ralph Nyland, Associate Professor and Distinguished Service Professor, respectively, SUNY-ESF, are organizing and conducting the trip. Collectively, they have about 75 years of learning and working experiences with ecology and silviculture of New York forests. Their long-term research will be highlighted during the trip, and balanced with various forest visits across the northern-tier of New York.
