Peach Bark Beetle

A Region's Black Cherry Resource Under Siege

November 9, 2004

Heiberg Memorial Forest
Tully, NY

Sponsored by
SUNY ESF and the USDA Forest Service

Peach Bark Beetle Workshop

The Peach Bark Beetle has been recognized as a pest in commercial fruit orchards since the mid-1800s. The potential to degrade healthy black cherry trees as a result of overwintering galleries was first reported in 1964. Infestation levels were fairly light until the 1990s when foresters and forest owners started observing extensive gumming due to the boring beetle. Given black cherry's status as one of the most valuable commercial species in the region, it is critical that forest resource managers better understand and are prepared to deal with the current outbreak.

Coordinator/Facilitator: René Germain, Associate Professor; Instructors: Jan Wiedenbeck, Project Leader, USDA Forest Service, Princeton, West Virginia; Douglas Allen, SUNY Distinguished Service Professor of Forest Entomology; Kim Adams, Extension Specialist, Ryan Hanavan & Josh Bogart, Research Assistants, Forest Entomology, SUNY ESF.
