This position is for the North Pacific Paper Company (NORPAC), which produces printing paper for customers in the western United States and Japan. NORPAC is a joint venture between Weyerhaeuser and Nippon Paper Industries of Japan.

Located at Weyerhaeuser's manufacturing complex in Longview, WA, this facility can manufacture more than 720,000 tons of printing paper annually. Interns are matched with opportunities in a variety of business and project support areas. The types of work activities available may include planning, analysis, design, development, implementation, testing, documentation, delivery, and support in several different parts of our organization.

As a valued member of a friendly, supportive and professional team, interns: gain professional experience with current technology while contributing to significant projects; build communication, interpersonal, and teamwork skills essential to a successful career; and connect with people across the company to learn about career opportunities. Interns are paid for their work. In addition to a supervisor who focuses on the intern's job duties and performance, each intern has a mentor who supports his/her professional development. Weekly intern activities build technical and non-technical competencies and career focus. Goal-setting, individual development planning and performance feedback promote professional growth.
