- b. Tim Volk - wanted to share this link to the Intergroup Dialogue Project at Cornell - <https://www.idp.cornell.edu/>. (I see Syracuse is also running a Intergroup Dialogue - <http://intergroupdialogue.syr.edu/about/>) There are alot of parts of this but I have wondered if it might be worth a visit and thinking about how we might work some of this into the ESF campus. For example, many students take a 132 1 credit introductory course in their major and this might be a place where some of these ideas and approaches could be incorporated. It also looks like there are student facilitator that are trained to help run dialogues, which seems like an effective way to engage students and multiply the impact. I wonder if we might be able to blend this with the ideas that Interfaith Works uses for dialogue circles?
