Are you interested in the integration of indigenous and scientific knowledges in environmental research?

Do you want a STEM career in service to land and culture?

The Center for Native Peoples and the Environment at the State University of New York's College of Environmental Science & Forestry is recruiting students for graduate study in diverse environmental sciences from ecology, conservation biology to restoration and environmental engineering. The program anticipates funding for full tuition and stipends for 4 Native American graduate students beginning in the Fall of 2019.

Additional information can be found on our website:

http://www.esf.edu/nativepeoples/
or contact Dr. Robin Wall Kimmerer at rkimmer@esf.edu